Mimi and the Mountain

She Fights for Preservation

By JOHN HORGAN

San Bruno Mountain rises like an outsized bookend at the northern tip of San Mateo County. It soars 1,314 feet into the mists and fog of the North County. It encompasses more than 3,500 acres of wild, mostly uninhabited land.

The mountain is a peaceful place. But the question of what to do with it is far from a calm proposal. Controversy swirls around its coveted flanks. And at the center of the maelstrom is a Brisbane woman who is determined to keep the mountain pristine.

Mimi Whitney lives in the shadow of San Bruno Mountain. And she wants to keep it that way. She has long opposed certain developments on the imposing mountain lands, particularly projects which would encroach on the valuable Saddle Area, a sector located about midway along the Guadalupe Canyon Parkway to the north. This is the region over which so many of Whitney's struggles have ensued.

She is a co-founder of the Save San Bruno Mountain Committee. The other co-founder, Bette Higgins, moved from the North County two years ago. That leaves Whitney as the committee leader with the longest tenure. She still represents the committee at public hearings and meetings of a range of government agencies which have some say in what is going to happen to the mountain.

Those who long to see the mountain preserved in its natural state laud Whitney as nothing less than a savior. Her opponents, however, view her as something far less angelic. Ronald Grudzinski, a project manager for Visitacion Associates, says his opinions on Whitney's role in keeping developments off the mountain are so strong that he would prefer to keep them to himself. Says he, "I'll be candid. In my position as manager, I cannot comment on that."

Visitacion Associates controls 327 acres in the Saddle Area, a prime piece of real estate which commands striking vistas of San Francisco and the Bay Area. Originally, the firm had planned to build 5,420 dwelling units in that region. But that project has been essentially stifled by a 3-2 ruling of the county's Board of Supervisors. Now, the matter is in litigation.

The San Francisco company wants to either develop its land or get full value for it. The supervisors have deemed it to be open space. How much is the property worth? That is a nettlesome bone of contention which has caused repercussions to be felt all the way to Sacramento.

The county has decided to spend $3 million to buy 1,250 acres on the south side of Guadalupe Canyon Parkway, across the road from the Saddle Area. The aim is to create a park there someday. The land is owned by the Crocker Land Co.

The state's Park and Recreation Commission has $4 million available which could be used to purchase acreage on the mountain as well. But where? Whitney

Hopes Dashed for DC Dump Extension

By NANCY STANCILL

Daly City officials have been hoping that state approval of the Mussel Rock Solid Waste Transfer Station would guarantee an easy extension on the Mussel Rock dump closing deadline.

But their hopes apparently have been dashed.

City Manager David Rowe Mondayrequested that the San Francisco Bay Area Regional Water Quality Control Board consider extending the Aug. 15 dump closing deadline to February 1978.

That's when the solid waste transfer station construction is expected to be completed, replacing the dumping operation at the Mussel Rock site.

But, Rowe told the City Council Monday night, a meeting with the executive director ofthe Water Quality Control Board produced no agreement on an extension.

Instead, the executive director asked Rowe to furnish further information on alternate ways to handle garbage while the transfer station is being constructed.

The Mussel Rock Transfer Station, which received the final go-ahead last week from the California State Coastal Commission, would be used for compacting garbage and transferring it to large trucks for hauling to the county's Ox Mountain dump at Half Moon Bay.

The transfer facility will serve Daly City, Pacifica and the unincorporated area of Broadmoor.

Rowe said the water agency staff wants Daly City to explore direct haul to Ox Mountain or short term use of the South San Francisco or San Francisco transfer stations as alternatives to continuing dump use past Aug. 15.

The August deadline was imposed by the WQCB last year in an attempt to stop dumping before a major landslide causes ocean pollution from he garbage there.

Rowe has indicated that to discontinue use of the dump before the transfer station is completed would be costly to the city.

He told the council that he doesn't expect a recommendation from the agency staff before the end of July. The WQCB probably won't meet on the matter before September.

However, the city manager said the dump probably could be used until a decision on the extension is reached by the board.

Rowe said he was disappointed with the executive director's initial response, but "at least the door is open for a 'yes' vote from the board."

At Rowe's request, the council voted to file a formal request for extension with the board.

Several residents questioned the council on the transfer station operation Rowe has proposed for its development.

Under the proposal, the Daly City Scavenger Co. would form a separate corporation to construct and operate the transfer station and vehicles. The city would then contract with the corporation for the operation.

Robert Kerr questioned the concept of a 49-year lease of the scavenger company's portion of the site to Daly City.

"Forty nine years is a long time to be tied up," he said.

City Atty. Albert Polonsky pointed out that the 49-year arrangement refers only to a site lease, not the actual operation of the station.

Mayor Albert Teglia said such an agreement would be for Daly City's benefit, "so we can cancel and no one could cancel on us."

Teglia thanked a lengthy list of city staffers and residents for working toward the transfer station's acceptance by the regional and state coastal commissions.

Board Eyes Court Action

By BILL HURSCHMANN

Jefferson Elementary School District trustees decided Monday night to seek court action if necessary to recover money spent during an in-service training week which all teachers attended but in which most did not participate.

The action is aimed at the district's teachers, and not Educators Improvement Service, which provided the training June 20-24. JESD trustees agreed to pay the in-service firm the amount requested, rather than the original contract of amount $13,365.

Trustee Dorothy Adams instructed the district's administration to discuss with attorneys the district's procedure in recovering funds. She suggested either an employe review board or court action, and other trustees agreed.

The week of in-service training was long a bone of contention in the district. All teachers were required to attend the training, but did so under protest.

None of the nine in-service leaders from Educators Improvement Service worked the entire week. Some worked no longer than the first day.

Teachers, represented by the Jefferson Classroom Teachers Association, claimed having to work June 20-24, one week after school had closed, conflicted with summer plans.

Teachers also charged that the district's decision to

Council Declines to Discuss Suggestion on Broadmoor

Daly City's City Council Monday declined to discuss a resident's suggestion that it consider providing police service to the Broadmoor Police Protection District under a second temporary contract.

The council steered its attention away from the controversial topic on the advice of City Atty. Albert Polonsky.

Polonsky suggested that since the matter of a permanent contract still is under litigation, the council "should not take further action at this time."

San Mateo County Superior Court Judge Melvin Cohn ruled two weeks ago that officials of the Broadmoor Police Protection District could not sign the proposed permanent, seven-year contract with Daly City because it did not contain a "reasonable" cancellation clause. He imposed a preliminary injunction on the Broadmoor Police Commission.

County Deputy Dist. Atty. George Camerlengo has said he will file a petition this week for a writ in the Court of Appeals on the matter.

If the writ is granted, the contract could be signed.

Polonsky noted that, in a separate action, he has filed a demurrer in Superior Court requesting that the members of Daly City's City Council who voted for the contract be removed from legal action resulting from a Broadmoor residents' suit against the contract.

Resident Ernie Pezzola asked the council to consider providing police protection to Broadmoor under a second six-month contract.

The first six-month contract between Broadmoor and Daly City was in effect from Jan. 1 to June 30. Because Broadmoor's police could only work for six months as temporary employes under the city's civil service ordinance, it expired when a permanent contract could not be signed.

Pezzola asked the council if the beginning of a new fiscal year would be a condition providing for another temporary contractural arrangement.

City officials declined to discuss the matter, though City Manager David Rowe earlier had said a technical possibility for a second, temporary contract existed.

Pezzola urged that the council consider providing jobs for the seven Broadmoor police employes who were laid off two weeks ago with a month's paid leave of absence.

However, last week, one of the employes, Police Chief Bill Beard, was called back to work as police district manager by a vote of the Broadmoor Police Commission. The arrangement will continue through July.

Pezzola said the temporary contract would give Broadmoor a chance to get liability insurance straightened out for its return as an independent department.

Pezzola's suggestion to the Daly City City Council brought comments from Alex Sola, a Broadmoor resident. Sola suggested that Pezzola mind his own business.

"Broadmoor has its problems," said Sola. "Broadmoor can handle them."

In other action, the City Council:

- Approved an expenditure budget of non tax-supported funds, including allocations for federal revenue sharing, employment programs, debt service, traffic safety, parking, water operations, community block grant and water operations. The total non-tax-supported budget is $6,621,460.
- Voted to sign a memorandum of understanding with Daly City's American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes (AFSCME) and the city's police officers and supervisors.The employe organizations were the last to accept a 5.5 per cent wage increase.
- Approved a grant application for $89,273 in federal funding to continue the Neighborhood Family Project, a juvenile diversion program.

Spillover from San Francisco

Drug-Related Killings Hit DC

A different kind of killing is responsible for Daly City's escalating homicide rate.

A record 10 slayings have been committed within the city since the beginning of the year. According to the Daly City Police Department, five of them have been drug-related.

Killings in which the sale or use of narcotics was a factor have not been a part of the Daly City scene until recently, said Lt. Tom Culley.

But as San Francisco's urban population continues to spill over into the suburban community, Culley expects the trend to continue.

"Criminals in the San Francisco metropolitan area are expanding their activities and dope dealers are plying their trade," said Culley.

With five months yet to go in 1977, the current homicide rate already has topped the 1976 total of five and the 1975 and 1974 statistics of eight in each year.

Several of the drug-related slaying victimswere slain in execution-style killings, said Culley, pointing out the more professional criminal element.

A prominent example of this trend was the double homicide of San Francisco Hell's Angels leader Harry (The Horse) Flamburis and his girlfriend at Flamburis' Daly City residence in January.

The double slayings have not yet been solved, though the remaining eight of the year's homicide so far have prompted subsequent arrests by Daly City police.

Besides the five drug-related homicides, there has been one killing in which robbery was a factor. The other four involved violent disputes between family members or neighbors.

"Any time you have a violent argument between a husband and wife, you're just a fraction away from a murder," said Culley.

Culley said when police officers encounter frequent family disputes, they refer the persons to mental health counseling resources or to the parish priest or minister. But he doubts if many take advantage of such services.

He explained that police officers have to proceed carefully in such an inflamed situation as a family argument, because "their presence could rekindle the whole thing over again."

Culley sees more hope for controlling drug-related murders than domestic violence since police can at least work on control of drug traffic.

In the past few years, the department has seized large amounts of narcotics and made substantial drug arrests.

But the police lieutenant said drug dealers are an increasingly sophisticated lot.

"They know all about search and seizure and police methods," he said. "It's harder to pin them down."

Brief Strike on BART System

Thousands of Bay Area commuters had already battled their way home in bumper-to-bumper traffic when the BART walkout was settled at 11:30 p.m. Friday.

Train operators agreed to go back to work on Monday, providing BART service as usual with five men working the controls and a sixth working as a back-up.

Amalgamated Transit Local No. 1555 said Friday the drivers did not report for work because they were concerned about a cutback in the number of men assigned to work in the computer center.

Joe Grime, president and business agent of the union, said the drivers felt it was unsafe to consolidate two supervisory positions at central headquarters, decreasing the total number of people controling the center from six to five.

BART had scheduled a test with five controllers at work and one working as a back-up for Friday.

BART officials charged that the drivers' walkout was illegal.

"They pulled a wildcat strike which is illegal under the current contract over an issue we are surprised about because it doesn't have merit. They say the issue is losing a job, but they won't be losing a job," said Dianne Levine, a BART public information officer.

Mrs. Levine said that the union had refused to meet to settle the strike until 2 p.m. Friday, although the contract calls for instant arbitration in the event that the terms of the contract are violated.

Mrs. Levine said that BART was not even told the reason for the strike until Friday noon, when a

Colma Petition Decision Slated

Colma's City Council is expected to decide today what to do about a petition calling for a citywide referendum on construction of a K-Mart department store on El Camino Real.

The petition, containing 70 signatures, currently is being evaluated by City Atty. Robert Cornell, who is expected to make a recommendation to the council at its 7:30 p.m. meeting.

The signatures of one-fourth of the small city's 205 registered voters are needed to bring the devel-

Armed Robber Kidnaps Driver

A man escaped with more than $4,000 cash being carried to a bank in a van owned by Serramonte Home Improvement Center Monday after kidnaping the driver and forcing him to drive through South San Francisco.

According to Colma police, the suspect broke into the van at about 11:30 a.m. at the Home Improvement Center, 1200 Collins Ave., and waited for the driver, Rande Spinali, San Mateo, who normally carried the weekend receipts to the bank.

Police said when Spinali entered the van, the suspect told him not to look in the mirror and to drive as ordered.

Police said the victim and suspect then drove through various South San Francisco streets before winding up at the end of Avalon Drive near the Freeway 280 on-ramp. The suspect then tied up Spinali and locked him inside the van, police said.

Police said $4,027.42 in cash is missing, plus checks and credit card receipts.

The suspect, who carried a revolver, is described as white, between 35 and 45, with medium length gray hair and wearing old-style pants and a brown shirt. He is wanted on armed robbery and kidnaping charges.

JESD Seeks Building Grant

A packet of suggestions on how to spend $1.6 million in federal public works funding has been sent by Daly City to the regional office of the Economic Development Administration (EDA).

The packet contains materials from Daly City and from the North San Mateo County Sanitation District, but only a cover letter from the Jefferson Elementary School District.

City Manager David Rowe said JESD officials informed him that they would prefer to send their materials to EDA in a separate packet.

The matter over the materials underlined the JESD governing board's insistence that almost the entire $1.6 million allotted to Daly City agencies be spent on a JESD project to rebuild Crocker School.

JESD rejected a suggestion from representatives of the city and the sanitation district to split the funds three ways, so the EDA must decide how the money is to be used.

Daly City has requested funding for the proposed Gellert Park Recreation Building, handicapped facilities for the Daly City Civic Center, a retaining wall for the city's corporation yard and a Gellert gym and pool. The gym and pool, last on the priority list for Daly City, is the most expensive.

The sanitation district wants money for construction of a trunk sewer line, but has agreed to accept funding for the first two phases only.

and her followers want that money to go towards buying the Saddle Area. If that could be pulled off, nearly half the mountain would then be assured of remaining as open space forever.

But, as you would expect, Visitacion Associates feels that its investment in the Saddle Area is worth far more than $4 million. "The value has not been defined," says Grudzinski. But spokesmen for the company have said that at least $20 million would be more like it.

The state commission will take up the San Bruno Mountain question again at 10 a.m. July 22 at the Hilton Inn at the San Francisco International Airport. For Whitney, that is unfortunate. She can't be there. "I don't know what I'm going to do," she says. "I'm going to be on vacation that week."

That will be one of the few important mountain-related gatherings she has missed in this decade. Whitney's devotion to the mountain stems all the way back to 1967 when she first moved to Brisbane. "I loved the mountain as soon as I got here," she says. When she ventured into the Saddle Area one day, "I shrieked and ran through the meadow."

That love affair with her environment hasn't dimmed. Her opposition to development on the mountain began innocuously enough through a small newspaper article. It involved an open invitation from the Crocker Land Co. to come to a social function to listen to the firm's plans for the mountain. Out of that seemingly innocent soiree grew the Save San Bruno Mountain Committee.

"We didn't like all the answers we got," she recalls. "We all sort of waltzed around. We figured we should try to stop it (the development proposed by Crocker). So we organized."

That was in 1971. Since then, the level of antagonism has increased to the point where the two sides — the developers and the environmentalists — hardly speak to one another anymore. They stare at each other across the various meeting rooms of Northern California in a kind of steely cold war.

"We started attending all the meetings," says Whitney. "Everywhere they went, we went. Everywhere we went, they went. But they could hardly keep up with us. We thought our purpose was more substantial. We didn't have a board of directors or anything like that. We just gathered people as we went. People came from out of nowhere. The group grew like a house afire."

The committee, a loose band of professionals, housewives, students, politicians, teachers and others from the North County, has become a significant political force. Last fall, Fred Lyon of El Granada was easily elected to the county's Board of Supervisors. He won by almost 24,000 votes over McRobert Stewart of Daly City. The main issue in that election: development on San Bruno Mountain. Lyon stated he would not vote in favor of Visitacion's Saddle Area proposal. Stewart said he would. Lyon won in a landslide.

Asked for a list of committee members, Whitney shrugs and says, "The number of people who voted for Fred Lyon in the North County would be a good indicator." Countywide, Lyon polled 108,857 votes.

Whitney, 33, married and the mother of a son, is not a political babe-in-the-woods, if she ever was one. She says her experience in stopping Visitacion's plans has been invaluable.

"I came into this thing cold," she says. "It was my first time out. We were tackling a huge project. But it was so big that if you could walk through it, you could get through anything. It has taught me a lot about myself and life in general. It has taught me lessons that you can't read about in a book."

Whitney , a graduate of San Jose State University, is going to apply all that learning. She currently is working on a master's degree in planning, and she is employed by a Los Angeles developer as a consultant on the Sierra Point marina project on the North County shores of San Francisco Bay. She says the developer approached her first.

"They needed someone to come in with an environmental background," she explains. "They wanted someone from the community. It took me a month to resolve the conflicts. They allowed me to draw up my own contract. They could only benefit from it."

Has her position compromised her in the community? She says generally it has not.

"I'm a local person," she says. "I think I have solid respect from people in this community. They know me. I haven't escaped to the other side." She admits, however, that there are some in Brisbane who are opposed to the Sierra Point project.

She is concerned about the fate of Brisbane (population, 3,003) in the county's grand scheme of things. "It's a tiny, mighty, little city," she offers. "It has been discovering itself. It is a young city." But she worries about potential wolves at Brisbane's door.

Strike

union official finally returned their phone calls.

She explained that BART had received a letter from the union on July 6. "But normally, under our contract, we have 25 days to deal with and respond to such complaints," she said.

Grime complained that his letter had been ignored.

"We're not considering this a strike or a walkout. It is just that employes don't want to subject themselves to hazardous safety conditions and don't want to expose the public to those conditions," Grime said.

Cars were backed up six miles from the Bay Bridge toll plaza during the Friday morning commute rush.

Some commuters were also holding up traffic by demanding receipts when they paid the bridge toll, which increased to 75 cents on July 1. They hope to collect a 25-cent refund if a suit against the toll increase succeeds.

Two serious auto fires on the Bay Bridge and heavy traffic to the Giants baseball game at Candlestick Park contributed to the evening commute snarl. Some commuters sat in bumper-to-bumper traffic for four hours.

Traffic began to move again at 8:45 p.m., although it was still heavy.

Mrs. Levine said cooperation from bus companies, BART employes and the media helped prevent the crunch from being worse than it was.

"I think the media did an extraordinary job as far as keeping people informed on alternate forms of transportation. We also had tremendous help from AC Transit, San Francisco Muni and charter bus companies, who helped us get extra buses and drivers out," said Mrs. Levine.

She was especially impressed by the attitude of commuters. "We heard about car pools where people would go out of their ways to stop and ask complete strangers if they needed a ride home," she remarked.

Gallagher reported that the 5 S and Z routes which normally connect with BART in Daly City were switched to connect with the San Francisco Muni 14 lines at Misssion and San Jose streets.

make them attend was used only as a lever for negotiations, since the district and its teachers have yet to agree on a 1976-77 contract.

Mrs. Adams also suggested the district consider deducting a week's worth of salary for "those who were obligated to attend the workshops but who received no benefit from it." Mrs. Adams said later this is not intended to serve as an across-the-board docking of salaries, but "to seek damages against those who caused the disruptions."

Only Board Pres. Alvin Schwarzbach disagreed, indicating the matter should be discussed in executive session. He said, however, he did agree with the payment to Educators Improvement Service.

Trustees' comments followed the reading of a letter from Vernon F. Larsen, director of in-service training for Educators Improvement.

In his letter, Larsen said that after the contract had been awarded to his firm, "we began receiving a barrage of telephone calls from teachers requesting that we cancel our contract. These calls continued for three or four days and many calls came until late in the evening, which was very disturbing. Most calls were civil, but some were abusive. Two made threats and, incidentally, we did receive one definite threat by mail."

Larsen said as leaders attempted to conduct workshops, "worksheets were torn up, waste baskets knocked over — there was talking, reading, singing and requests were circulated for the leaders to leave. As time went on, the momentum seemed to increase and the participants became abusive."

Miriam Moss, JCTA representative, said, "Many of the allegations in that letter could not be supported. The conduct of the certificated employes occurred in a very different manner than presented in that letter." Miss Moss said JCTA would like time to study the letter in greater detail, and then prepare a rebuttal.

Several parents in the audience also criticized the letter, one saying, "I don't think this letter is completely true," and another adding, "This group, for $13,000, should have been more thick-skinned."

opment to a referendum in November.

The petition challenges the decision by the City Council to allow a zoning change for the development of the $3 million K-Mart Store, offices and 600-car parking lot.

The complex would be constructed by Michigan developer E. N. Maisel on a 10-acre parcel presently occupied by Pacific Nurseries.

Opponents of the project charge that the K-Mart would create traffic and flooding problems as well as detract from the cemetery city's quiet atmosphere.

'Acceptable'

Government economists claim a six per cent inflation rate is "acceptable." If inflation continues at a six per cent annual inflation rate until the year 2000, today's 70-cent pound of hamburger will cost $2.75. An 85-cent half-gallon of milk would cost approximately $3.30 and a dozen eggs costing 80 cents would be priced at $3.10 in 2000.

San Mateo Construction Up 90 Pct. This Year

Construction is booming in San Mateo, in fact it's 90 per cent over what it was for the first six months of 1976.

Building Official Lyle Hood has said that the end of June had recorded $18.5 million worth of construction, compared to $9.7 million for the same period a year ago.

The month of June had $5.4 million in building, most in new construction, compared to $2.9 million for June, 1976.

"The number of permits and their valuation indicate that construction will continue at a very good rate during the coming months," the building official added.

He pointed out that a $653,000 permit has been issued for the construction of a new Long's Drug store at 4242 S. El Camino Real, and a 58-unit condominium has been approved for construction at 58 N. El Camino Real.

In addition, according to Hood, a seven-unit condominium will be going up at 119 N. El Camino Real, plus 15 single-family homes and four new duplexes elsewhere in the city.

Water Plan Suggests Another Pipeline

By RICK SULLIVAN

A Comprehensive Water Resources Management Plan released last week warns that without permanent conservation measures San Mateo County's water supply will begin to fall short of demand in nine normal rainfall years.

But, the plan notes, if county water users reduce consumption by 5-6 per cent, the current supply of San Francisco Hetch Hetchy water, plus available ground and reclaimed water, could continue to meet demand until 1998.

To meet projected demands after that date, the plan prepared over a three-year period by the Peninsula Water Agency and the consulting firm of Leeds Hill and Jewett Inc., recommends that the Hetch Hetchy system be completed by adding a fourth pipeline at an estimated cost of $83 million.

Cost of the construction project, the plan suggests, should be borne by a metropolitan water agency representative of the four Bay Area counties which now use Hetch Hetchy water — San Mateo, Santa Clara, Alameda and San Francisco.

Release of the management plan and its suggested 5-6 per cent permanent conservation measure, comes at a time when San Mateo County water users are reducing consumption by a spectacular 47 per cent, the highest reduction rate of all counties which now use Hetch Hetchy water.

If county water customers continued to save water at even half that rate, the current water supply could last well into the next century.

But Robert Eppler, water resources manager for San Mateo County, said that management plan consultants concur that the county cannot count on customers conserving water at any great percentage after the current drought ends.

He said that 50 per cent of all domestic water is used outside the home. Edward Morey, chairman of the Peninsula Water Agency, added that water experts believe that customers will begin to irrigate their yards again as soon as the drought is over.

Education Board Budget Presented

Dr. J. Russell Kent, county superintendent of schools, has presented a tentative $18.4 million budget for next fiscal year to the county Board of Education.

Kent said last week that more than $900,000 was cut from the proposed budget over the past three months in an effort to maintain the current tax rate of 30 cents per $100 of assessed value of property.

The average house in thecounty increased 23 per cent in value this year. So holding the tax rate would mean a 23 per cent average increase in taxes.

The tentative budget does not include any funds for staff salary increases.

Salary negotiations for the four county Office of Education employe groups is in progress, according to Kent.

A public hearing on the tentative budget will be held Aug. 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the Office of Education in Redwood City.

In other business, Harold Purpus, president of the Board of Education, announced the resignaton of Elio Fonatana, a board member from the Daly City/Colma area.

Fontana, who originally was elected to the county board four years ago, won re-election to a new four-year term last March.

Purpus announced that the Board of Education will appoint a new member as required by law to fill the vacancy until an election is held Nov. 8.

Prior to the temporary appointment, the board will establish a citizens nominating committee to recommend candidates to the board.

Citizens interested in serving on the board should contact Dr. Myron Schussman at the County Education Office.

Treatment Reduces Repeat Drunken Driving

By VERA GRAHAM

Forcing drunken drivers into probation and treatment programs has resulted in a 500 per cent reduction of repeat offenses.

That's the startling result of a recently completed study of nearly 300 drunken drivers made by R. F. Van Cantfort, alcohol program consultant for the San Mateo County Adult Probation Department.

The study compared a group of 460 drunken drivers used in a previous survey, tracking them after sentencing. Of the group, 102 (22 per cent) had new convictions.

Concerned with such rates of recidivism, Don Helbush, director of the adult division, obtained a federal grant to follow up on 299 cases. It was discovered that 175 drunken drivers went through presentencing investigation, but were not placed on formal probation. Of their number, 17 per cent were rearrested for drunken driving.

Another group of 124 offenders was placed on formal probation. Twelve per cent were rearrested.

And, a third group of 77 drunken drivers was not only placed on formal probation but forced by court order into specific treatment. Of that number, only four per cent became repeaters.

The significance of the statistical and human study, according to Van Cantfort, is that drunken drivers can and should be forced to understand the nature, extent and direction of their problem and they must be forced to control themselves.

Van Cantfort is in wholehearted agreement with the noted Jesuit priest, Father Joe Martin, whose credo is "force 'em into treatment to save their lives."

In the case of drunken drivers, Van Cantfort adds, "to save other peoples' lives.

There are 29,000 alcoholics in San Mateo County, according to available statistics, and probably many "hidden alcoholics," concerning whom statistics are not yet available, the expert reports.

"During our study," Van Cantfort says, "we found something else very interesting. The number of prior arrests for drunken driving had no relation to getting another. People with no prior arrest had just as much of a chance of being arrested as those with priors. This clearly says that the person who is arrested for drunken driving has a problem with alcohol.

"You have to work at drunken driving to get arrested for it."

Another statistic which has emerged from the two-year study is that the blood alcohol level at the time of arrest has averaged .22. The legal definition of a drunken driver is .10.

What this means in terms of alcoholism, according to Van Cantfort, is that people who have been drinking long and heavy enough have built such a high tolerance they are able to into a car and drive, even with that much alcohol in their bloodstream.

He says, "Those who tell me 'I can drink anyone under the table,' and does just that, has a drinking problem.

"If he can walk out and get into the car, he should be under the table. He's a cinch for the morgue or a wheelchair."

Van Cantfort knows his business: People and alcohol. He is a retired lieutenant colonel of the U.S. Marine Corps, and for a number of years was the commanding officer of the naval prison in Portsmouth, N. H., where he established an alcohol education program and Alcoholics Anonymous unit. He attended a lot of AA meetings, learning much himself. That's where he got to know and admire Father Martin.

He also is one of the founders of the San Francisco Sunset Parkside Alcoholism Resources Committee. He's a counsellor in alcoholism and has donated countless hours as a volunteer to aid those fighting addiction to liquor.

Van Cantfort's role in San Mateo County is to provide guidance, direction, research and evaluation in all matters dealing with alcohol and the problems it creates.

As soon as a drunken driver shows up in court more than once, he becomes the concern and study of Van Cantfort and his staff. The repeat offender will be interviewed and investigated by a probation officer.

Each probation officer has been trained to understand the depths and persistence of alcoholism.

Starting Jan. 1, 1978, state law will require that the drunkeen driver arrested more than once be placed on probation and undergo specific treatment. In addition, time in jail may range from 48 hours to a year.

"People who say they 'celebrate once in a while,' meaning they get flat-out drunk, have a problem," Van Cantfort says.

Part of his effort is to work with judges. "They are well aware of the problem, are showing increasing concern about the problem and recognize the need to deal with alcoholism."

Last year, Van Cantfort says, 60 per cent of all those who went through the pre-sentencing investigation were ordered into an alcohol treatment program.

Despite the number of services and types of facilities which exist in San Mateo County, they are not sufficient to meet the need. Santa Clara County spends four times the amount per capita that San Mateo County does to cope with alcohol problems.

"Most alcoholics are abysmally ignorant about their problem, and probably intentionally avoid learning about its destructive direction," Van Cantfort says. "An alcoholic doesn't want to admit he's an alcoholic. And, as far as psychiatric treatment goes, you have to be sober before you can make any sense."

Many drunken drivers have indicated a preference for group therapy. It may be a case of safety in numbers and sharing a common problem. Some, however, prefer a one-to-one course of treatment, if possible.

All of the many available services have some fee requirement, based on the individual's ability to pay.

The purpose of reprogramming an alcoholic is to help him or her develop a new lifestyle, a way of living to avoid those situations, temptations and friends which have led to heavy drinking, according to Van Cantfort.

"An alcoholic spends a lot of time drinking and thinking about drinking, or recovering from a drinking bout.

"When he stops drinking, he has huge blocks of unoccupied time. Unless you have helped him to find alternate ways of filling that time in a productive and pleasurable way, he'll revert to his old drinking habits' explains the expert.

Van Cantfort recalls, "I had a client at one time who was a weekend drinker. He was all right during the week, but from Friday through Sunday, he drank continuously. When I finally got him to stop, he said, 'Now, what in God's name can I do with my time?' I got him paired up with some golfers, and he was interested in joining a religion, which used up his time and provided him with excellent recreational, social and spiritual outlets."

Van Cantfort emphasizes, "You can't overlook religion. An alcoholic has a feeling of helplessness, hopelessness and depression. Alcoholism and depression go hand-in-hand. People feel depressed. They drink. They feel better. They feel worse. They have a problem. They drink. The cycle is not only vicious, it's deadly."

When is an alcoholic an alcoholic? And, is every heavy drinker destined to be an alcoholic?

Van Cantfort says the best gauge to determine alcoholism is when it begins to have an adverse effect on his relationships, his marriage, his family, his friends, his job, his boss, and he comes into contact with the law.

Not all heavy drinkers become alcoholics. But, that's not to be used as an excuse. There's a difference between heavy drinkers who handle it, who have no problems, who are not obsessed with alcohol, who can take it or leave it.

"It's a question of what happens to a person's life, and his outlook on life when he drinks," Van Cantfort comments. "There are plenty of good people among us who are alcoholics, but you don't see them in the areas of their lives where they are having problems because of their drinking.

"Less than five per cent of the nation's alcoholics are on skid row," Van Cantfort reports.

"The rest are pretty good, average citizens, making their way through the workday, sometimes good, sometimes not so good, waiting for that drink that's going to make them feel great.

"But," he continues, "in due time, it gets them.

"Their life structure becomes pretty shaky. The boss begins to keep an eye on him. He picks up one or two arrests for drunken driving. He changes friends. He seeks out those who join him in his drinking.

"Yet, if you see him out in the front yard gardening on a Saturday, he (or she) is the good neighbor next door.

"Nobody would ever guess that nice lady who seldom comes out but occasionally bakes the greatest pies in the neighborhood is an alcoholic."

The typical San Mateo County drunken driver has an income well over the poverty level. Seventy-six per cent earn between $10,000 and $20,000 a year; 8 per cent earn over $20,000.

Thirty-seven per cent of the surveyed drunken drivers are presently married. Thirty per cent have not been married. Twenty-three per cent are divorced, and 10 per cent are separated, Van Cantfort reports. The two latter categories begin to show the disintegration of the family.

Other interesting statistics show that of the 299 arrested, 43 per cent had a blood alcohol level between .18 and .23; 26 per cent were from .24 to .29.

(One goes into a coma at .40.)

Eleven per cent of the people who reach the pre-anesthetic stage can consume enough to measure .30 blood-alcohol level. It's almost impossible to kill onself, except for getting behind the wheel of a car or downing a fifth of alcohol. The extent of tolerance depends on the size and weight of the body and pre-conditioning. There is a standard tolerance curve, it is explained. At some point in time, a person who can drink a great deal, suddenly finds his tolerance has dropped so sharply he or she can tolerate very little alcohol.

"And it's the same alcohol in a glass of beer, a shot of distilled liquor, a glass of wine," Van Cantfort says. "What makes the difference is the amount you drink. The body usually needs one hour to burn one ounce of alcohol. To drink more than one ounce in an hour is heading toward getting drunk, feeling high."

Most people, Van Cantfort says, time their drinking the wrong way. They drink at the end of the day, when they are tired, when they haven't had anything to eat. They glow faster.

"We run about 100 people per month through the alcohol driving courses. Many are students.

"Overall, I believe and I am concerned that drunken driving and alcoholism are on an upward spiral, and a lot of young people are getting involved," Van Cantfort emphasizes.

He notes, "We are seeing many, many more young people in their late teens, mid and early 20s. They have switched, in some cases, from drugs to alcohol. Alcohol is more socially acceptable, but they get just as bombed as they did on drugs, and they get just as addicted. Today too many are using hypos to shoot vodka into an organge instead of some drug into their vein. It's a problem we have to face and solve."

Van Cantfort reports there are numerous programs which offer help. AA, of course, is paramount, and a telephone call can locate one virtually anywhere in the county. The North County has an out-patient program, Pyramid Alternatives, which has special help for drunken drivers, outreach counselling and help with alcoholism.

Mary's Help Hospital has an in-patient rehabilitation program for those who need hospitalization.

In the central part of the county, there is Project 90, a residential program for men, located in San Mateo. There are four-man apartments to help those who need to be off the street and in some form of mutual care program.

There is the Women's Rehabilitation Association which has both an out-patient and drop-in program. Laurel House provides an in-patient care facility.

Until a month ago, there was nothing in the South County, whatsoever, says Van Cantfort, except for an AA unit at Sequoia Hospital. Now there is New Directions 90, which offers an out-patient counselling program in Redwood City.

San Mateo's Alcoholism Center is a year old and is mainly backed by the Machinists Union. It is essentially an independent operation. And, there are private facilities such as Raleigh Hills and Belmont Hills.

"The opportunity for help is there for anyone who has the courage to realize his or her need," Van Cantfort states.

Mini Forest Fire Called Despicable

In what Fire Chief Lawrence Toellner described as a "despicable act," arsonists set fire last Thursday night to a mini forest on Sign Hill in South San Francisco.

The fire was reported at 7:56 p.m., and two South San Francisco engine companies responded. It took firemen about an hour to quell the blaze, which destroyed between 50 and 100 trees, perhaps 25 per cent of the mini forest's total.

"These trees on Sign Hill have been the result of an effort by some of our citizens to develop a mini forest on a bare hill," Chief Toellner said Friday. "The trees were under constant care for the past several years."

Toellner said he believes the fire was deliberately set because it originated inside an area which is protected by a firebreak.

"We have no way of knowing who set it or how," Toellner added, "but we do know it was deliberately set."

Lives Saved

California's month-long voluntary 55 mph compliance campaign cut speeds by one-half mile per hour and saved 20 lives, reports the California Highway Patrol.

Analysis of the May effort showed statewide speeds averaged 54.9 mph for the month, a half mile lower than April which was used as a base for comparative purposes.

Survey Shows Rescue Reaction

If you have a heart attack, what are the chances that the people around you can get help quickly — or keep you alive until professional help arrives?

Three people in four say they have an emergency number handy, either on a sticker attached to the telephone or in the front cover of the phone book. But only one person in four would call the fire department, which in most counties is the best way to get help fast.

These are some of the results from a telephone survey recently conducted by the Association of Bay Area Governments' Emergency Medical Services (EMS) project. The survey was designed to test consumer awareness of emergency services and techniques.

Ethnic and racial minority groups in the Bay Area are shown to need more emergency services information. Almost half of the blacks surveyed and 38 per cent of the Asians did not have an emergency number handy in case they needed help. Blacks more than other ethnic groups view emergency services as slow, and rate existing ambulance service poor.

Seventy-six percent of the Asians surveyed turn to emergency rooms for non-emergency cases (compared to about 38 per cent of the region as a whole). Asians frequently see emergency rooms as their only access to health care.

Among Hispanics responding to the survey, 80 per cent said they had an emergency number handy, but this figure is deceptive. The language barrier is a serious obstacle in getting help, and there is no guarantee that the person receiving the emergency call can speak Spanish.

Although women tend to call the fire department in an emergency more frequently than do men, and although they perceive services to be faster and better, far fewer women than men are trained in first aid techniques.

Try not to have that heart attack in San Francisco. Almost half the residents there would call the hospital or a doctor in an emergency. Up to 60 per cent of the people in the other eight counties would call the fire department or an ambulance, both of which can respond more directly. San Franciscans are the most pessimistic when estimating the time it would take for help to arrive. One person in four thinks it would take longer than 15 minutes.

District Will Share Fence Construction

By TERRY DAVENPORT

Good fences make good neighbors.

That's what the Laguna Salada Union School District board informally decided at its last meeting.

After a long discussion, the board agreed with the Terra Nova Homeowners Association that an additional fence should be built between Ortega School in Pacifica and the condominiums that adjoin the school in order to discourage students from trespassing.

The homeowners had complained that students who take a shortcut from Ortega School to Terra Nova Boulevard are inflicting damage on private property.

Jean McNair of the Homeowners Association said she has personally witnessed youths throwing rocks at homeowners' cars — including her own — three times. She complained that the cars cannot be totally shielded since the condominiums have only carports and no garages.

Mrs. McNair added that the residents have had their car tires slashed, their cars broken into, and items taken from the storage areas over their carports.

The board deliberated in a "chicken or the egg" kind of argument, debating whether the district has any responsibility since Ortega School was built before the condominiums were.

"There is some responsibility on the part of the builder. I have some feelings that it is not the district's responsibility to provide the construction of a fence to prevent vandalism," said Board Chairman Grady Hesters.

Board member Marilyn Wills remarked, "I think our real job is to do something about the attitude that causes school vandalism."

Board member Rudy Tretten expressed hope that the school's new administration in the fall will help correct the problem. However, the board wouldn't buy a suggestion to delay a clearcut answer."

Although the board was concerned about establishing a precedent of furnishing fences, members finally agreed to make the same offer they had made to residents near Fairmont School who once came to the board with a similar problem.

The board asked its staff to draw up a formal motion for consideration at the next meeting that would direct the district to pay the labor cost of building the fence and of maintaining it, if the Terra Nova Homeowners Association agrees to pay for the materials.

Violet Gotelli, state president of Active Women Advancing a Responsible Environment (AWARE), told the board about her plans to stress teaching of the free enterprise system at the secondary level.

Mrs. Gotelli said a survey of seven schools in the county had revealed that 50 per cent of the students graduating from high school had no marketable skills.

Her plan will involve businesses and unions with the schools to help students understand the working world while attaining skills.

Mrs. Gotelli asked the board to set up a list of standards to be adhered to at the elementary level, saying, "This is where the big failure in my own estimation is being made — in the lower grades."

She said that private schools with strict standards are teaching students at a faster pace than public schools.

Hesters assured Mrs. Gotelli that the board has had its curriculum committee working to develop such standards for 1½ years and that those standards, when ready, will be brought before the community.

SSF Spurns Federal Planning Grant

South San Francisco councilmen have said they don't want the assistance of the U.S. Department of Commerce in planning the future of abandoned industrial properties and the downtown business district.

The council voted 3 to 1 last week to table a proposal by City Planner William Costanzo to apply for a $75,000 Economic Development Assistance grant.

Councilman Dick Battaglia voted against tabling the proposal.

If the city received the grant, Costanzo said, South San Francisco would provide $25,000 toward the study in "in-kind" services, including planning staff technical assistance and secretarial help.

The planner said he has been in touch with the Department of Commerce about the possibility of preparing an "economic adjustment strategy" for the vacated Bethlehem and U.S. Steel Corporation properties in the industrial park, as well as for most of the downtown area.

The study, he said, would develop a strategy to promote new employment, rehabilitate commercial structures and provide new public improvements and services.

"This is being done in order to provide new economic incentives to property owners and merchants in this area," he said.

Bethlehem Steel recently announced plans to vacate its plant by the end of the summer.

Costanzo said he's not entirely convinced that the property should continue to be used by industry.

SSF: 'Little City Takes On State'

South San Francisco is getting ready to battle the state Employment Development Department.

The City Council last week told City Planner William Costanzo to do whatever is necessary to get the EDD to adhere to parking regulations on its property.

Costanzo said the city can implement legal proceedings that would eventually lead to revoking the EDD's use permit.

Councilman Terry Mirri called it a case of "little city takes on big state."

The city has been concerned about parking ever since the EDD — formerly the Employment Department — built a modern office on Spruce Avenue.

The department moved from its old, crowded building in the downtown area on Miller Avenue a year ago.

Costanzo said the planning staff, Planning Commission and City Council were led down a rosy path by the EDD officials who promised that parking on the new property would be sufficient.

They assured the city that employes would park a block away on Huntington Avenue and that many of the EDD patrons would arrive by Sam-Trans bus.

But, Costanzo said, it's become apparent the employe parking regulations are not being enforced. In addition, the closing of a San Francisco branch EDD has funneled many persons into the South San Francisco office, further complicating the parking problem.

Councilman William Borba said the adjacent undeveloped lot looks like used car lot as a result of the EDD overflow parking.

Costanzo said he's been told by EDD officials that a new office is going to be opened in San Frncisco, taking some of the load off the local office. However, that opening date doesn't appear to be in sight, he said.

NELL NORTON

Good morning, good cooks.

Fresh milk and real butter — what could be more basic to fine dessert making? Just as the old maxim says, for best results you must start with the best ingredients. This is the perfect time to bake and serve some delectable new desserts with old-fashioned flavor.

Mississippi mud cake, for instance, is a great goodie to try out on friends and family. Really a super deluxe kind of brownie, it has a buttery batter flavored with cocoa and vanilla and textured with wheat germ and chopped nuts. A snowy layer of marshmallows is added during the last five minutes of baking. And if that isn't enough, it's topped with a butter cocoa icing. Cut the mud cake into small bars to serve.

Do try this California version of a famous Southern recipe.

MISSISSIPPI MUD BARS

¾ cup butter
¾ cup sugar
1 egg
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
½ cup cocoa
1 cup flour
½ cup regular vacuum packed wheat germ
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped walnuts
1½ cups mini marshmallows
Icing

Beat together the three-fourths cup each butter and sugar. Beat in the egg, one-half cup milk and one teaspoon vanilla. Mix the half cup cocoa, one cup flour, one-half cup wheat germ and half teaspoon salt. Stir into the batter. Mix in the one cup walnuts. Turn into a well greased 9-inch square pan. Bake in 350 degree oven for 25 minutes. Sprinkle with the cup and half of marshmallows. Bake 5 minutes longer or until pick inserted into center comes out dry and marshmallows are melted. Cool. Spread with icing. When set, cut into bars.

Makes 2 dozen bars.

ICING

¼ cup butter
1½ cups powdered sugar
¼ cup cocoa
½ teaspoon vanilla
3 tablespoons milk

Melt the fourth cup butter. Mix in the one and one-half cups powdered sugar, fourth cup cocoa, half teaspoon vanilla and three tablespoons milk. Blend well and spread over top of cooled marshmallows.

NOTE: This icing is very soft, but it will set up nicely.

To hurry the setting-up along, I put the cake in the refrigerator.

FROM THE 1920s

Frank Ford, left, of Gryphon Stringed Instruments in Palo Alto examines a harp-guitar while his partner Richard N. Johnston is shown with a mando-bass. Both instruments will be part of a special $20,000 display of American guitars, mandolins, banjos and other stringed instruments set for the Tom O'Connell Antiques and Collectors' Sale at the Cow Palace, Daly City, Saturday and Sunday, July 16-17. Hours for the show are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days. There is a $1.50 admission charge.

Seniors May Qualify For Property Tax Aid

If you are 62 or older and have a total income of less than $12,000 for 1976, you may qualify for Senior Citizen Property Tax assistance.

Information on the state program may be obtained from the exemption section, County Assessor's office, second floor, Old Courthouse, Redwood City.

Eligible residents have until Aug. 31 to file a claim and can call the assessor's office at 364-5600, ext. 4193 for assistance with filing claims.

Information and claim forms are also available at State Franchise Tax Board offices in San Francisco and San Jose.

One of the requirements for assistance under the program is that applicants have owned and occupied their homes sometime during the period from July 1, 1976 through June 30, 1977.

The state program provides percentage reimbursement to eligible seniors ranging from 4 per cent for an income of $11,500 to 94 per cent for an income of $3,000.

Many senior citizens will receive state property tax refunds late this year because they forgot to attach their property tax bill or attached a tax bill for the wrong year to the claim form, according to the Franchise Tax Board.

"When this happens, the department must contact the individual for a copy of the 1976-77 tax bill and the refund is delayed," said Donald Whitney, director of the Senior Citizens Property Tax Assistance Program.

Some seniors filing for the first time are forgetting to attach proof of age, while others are not signing the claim form. Their refunds also will be delayed, Whitney said.

Whitney said the errors were discovered after examining the first 50,000 property tax assistance claim forms filed.

The Franchise Tax Board estimates that over 300,000 senior citizens will qualify for an average property tax refund of $236 this year.

More than 80 per cent of all land owned by corporations is held by family corporations with 10 shareholders or less.

County Fair Prepares Entertainment Lineup

A dazzling "Showtime '77" lineup with something for everyone awaits visitors to the San Mateo County Fair & Floral Fiesta July 25 through Aug. 6.

The fair's opening night will spotlight this year's "South of the Border" theme with the dizzying flounce and driving rhythm of the Theatre Flamenco of San Francisco. The versatile dance troupe, which also features song, classical guitar and poetry, will appear at 8:45 p.m. on July 25 in the Fiesta Bowl.

Andy Russell, worldwide recording star in Spanish and English, will headline the fair entertainment from July 26-31. Russell, a 30-year show business veteran, stars often on U.S. talk shows and has his own TV program in Mexico.

Lawrence Welk Show fans will get a special treat with the honkey-tonk keyboard antics of former Welk regular Jo Ann Castle, who performs at Las Vegas, Reno and throughout the U.S.

Also appearing on the July 26-31 bill of fare will be the breathtaking balancing act of Murillo, Ulises and Luisa, who suspend their bodies between the points of two razor-sharp daggers.

Highlighting the fair's second week of entertainment will be the classic harmonies of the Inkspots. A headline act for many years, the Inkspots will offer a versatile show with appeal for everyone at the Aug. 1-3 performances.

The velvet sounds of the Lancers, called "one of the most polished, classy acts in the U.S.," will also sooth fairgoers' ears, as they head the Fiesta Bowl lineup Aug. 4, 5 and 6. The quartet also features humorous interpretations in their show.

Sharing the bill with both vocal groups will be clarinettist "Peanuts" Hucko, called the Pied Piper of Jazz. Hucko, who first found fame in the Glenn Miller Orchestra in the forties, appears at jazz festivals throughout the world.

The Aug. 1-6 lineup also will offer a special eyepopper for fairgoers — the knife-throwing skill of TV "Gong Show" winner Larry Cisewski. The high point of Cisewski's show will be the 100 rpm "Wheel of Death" feat, in which he outlines in daggers the blurred, spinning image of his assistant on a wheel.

Rounding out the Fiesta Bowl entertainment roster will be the Ray Hackett Orchestra, playing "Easy listening" guaranteed to please fairgoers of all ages.

Showtime '77 will begin each evening at 8:45, with additional matinees at 4:00 p.m. on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Help Wanted

The following agencies have requested volunteer assistance from the Volunteer Bureau/Voluntary Action Center of San Mateo County, with offices in Burlingame, Daly City and Redwood City.

The local telephone number for area residents is 992-0957, an answering service. Residents may also call the main office in Burlingame at 342-0801, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Day Camp for the Handicapped — Many volunteers are needed to assist at the annual day camp for handicapped children and young adults held at Coyote Point in August. Adult and youth volunteers are needed to assist with outdoor recreation activities. Volunteers are the most essential part of the camp due to the time and attention they can give to each camper. The experience is mutually rewarding. Volunteers serve for a two-week session from 9:45 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. daily with two sessions to choose from in August.

YWCA — Interested volunteers are needed to help plan and create a shelter for battered women in San Mateo County. The time and hours are flexible as the meetings will be arranged.

Guadalupe Health Clinic — A young developmentally disabled man needs a visitor to talk with and share activities. This would involve meeting one evening per week and a man visitor is preferred.

Service League of San Mateo County — If you are a young person, someone kids can relate to, admire and feels understands them, you are needed to be a PAL to a youngster from a troubled family. PALS is a youth program designed to give children with a parent in jail a more stable role model and experiences promoting positive motivation and growth.

Camp Sierra for the Handicapped — Many volunteers are needed for this resident camp for handicapped persons held in three areas in the Sierra. The camp will continue until Aug. 28 with one week sessions to choose from. Transportation will be provided from San Francisco and volunteers are welcome to come for only one week. Volunteers will assist in all camp activities and no experience is necessary, only the willingness to work with handicapped persons.

Additional information about these and other interesting volunteer opportunities for adults and our Summer Youth Program may be obtained by contacting the Volunteer Bureau at the telephone numbers listed above or by dropping by our main office in Burlingame, located at 119 Primrose Road. Interviews will be made in Daly City by appointment only.

GIRL SCOUTING

Daly City Girl Scouts are now at Camp Sugar Pine in Calaveras County to celebrate Sierra Camp July 10-15, directed by Camping Coordinator, Carole Ann Scott.

Program directors include Carolyn Futrell and Sue Scaduto with senior aide Darlene Rusting. The camp provides a professional central staff but local adult volunteers are required.

Business manager is Donna Barnes. There are two units for campers: one junior scout unit and one unit for cadettes and seniors.

In charge of junior scouts are Trish Sullivan and Louise Ramos with senior aides Seona Connolly and Kathy Hansel.

The cadette and senior unit will be staffed by Margaret Connolly and Diane Pangburn with senior aides Nanette Futrell and Sue McDowell.

Program includes swimming and water games, folk dancing, art, archery and a picnic at Fanny Falls.

Ryan's Survey Shows Abortion Law Favored

Congressman Leo J. Ryan (D-San Mateo) has released the results from the public opinion poll in his April newsletter. The questions centered on capital punishment, abortion and postal service, and 1065 responses were received, Ryan said.

The final tabulation by Ryan's Washington, D.C. staff showed that 69 per cent favor the present unlimited access abortion laws, 60 per cent favor capital punishment under present Supreme Court restrictions, and 82 per cent favor the concept of laws regulating the right to die.

In the area of postal service, Congressman Ryan reported that 79 per cent believe that periodical magazines should pay their own way even if the magazine prices would be significantly increased. Other results showed 53 per cent opposed to six-day-a week mail delivery, 59 per cent in favor of contracting for private delivery of parcel post in cities, and 60 opposed to private enterprise bidding for all mail delivery in cities, with the federal Post Office limited to rural delivery at a subsidy.

Reproductions Commissioned

A Colma businessman has commissioned Italian marble sculptors and artists to reproduce masterpieces, religious statues and modern art for display in Colma.

Elio A. Fontana, president of V. Fontana & Co., recently returned from a purchasing trip in Italy where he commissioned the sculptors of Piestrasanta and Carrara.

The works are expected to be completed next year and will be exhibited in the statue display showroom at Fontana's main company office, 7600 El Camino Real, Colma.

"This display of Italian Carrara marble art will be the most comprehensive exhibit to be shown in the United States in recent years," Fontana said.

Movies Slated

The Daly City Recreation Department, in conjunction with the Jefferson Elementary School District, announces the following movie schedule which will be effective through Aug. 18.

Check with local playground leaders for the time at included playground.

Week of July 11-15, Life & Times of Grizzly Adams; July 18-22, Rings Around the World; July 25-29, Hercules Unchained; Aug. 1-5, Son of Paleface; Aug. 8-12, Snow White and Three Stooges; Aug. 15-18, Hans Christian Anderson.

Coyote Point Film Festival

Coyote Point Museum for Environmental Education is sponsoring its first summer film festival.

Films to be shown are international in scope and deal with environmental issues including all aspects of the cultural and natural worlds and the relationships that exist between them.

They will be shown at the San Mateo Garden Center, Parkside Way in San Mateo, Fridays beginning July 22 from 7:30-9 p.m., free of charge.

(Last of a series)

George Kelly has kept involved with the baseball as a fan during his retirement, and has some definite opinions on today's game.

"The main trouble with most kids today is that they have no baseball background, no practical experience. They have as much talent as we ever did, but we had baseball sense, because years ago it was all baseball. That's all kids talked about. Today, baseball is a side interest. And besides that, we were educated in the minors, which are almost gone, today.

"Now I don't begrudge these kids the salaries they make. They're entitled to every nickel they can get. But the franchise has to be able to afford it, and if people don't show up because the kids aren't playing major league calibre ball, then the players can't expect anything. Today's ballplayer ought to wake up and give the fan a run for his money, like Pete Rose does. But a lot of players don't like Rose. They think he's a hot dog!

"A lot of them today are so selfish. Fans think, for instance, that they can't bunt. They can bunt, but they're greedy, because they figure you don't get paid big money by being a bunter. That's another thing that's lacking in baseball today. Simple teamwork. You watch a lot of these fellas. They stand around their position. They have an imaginary circle and they never move out of it. Watch the ball hit to the center fielder and it gets by him. How many times have you seen one of the other outfielders backing him up? Rarely, I would wager.

"Kids just don't like to take coaching anymore, either, especially from older guys. I've talked to some of these fellas, and they look at you like, 'What the hell does he know?' They say, 'This is the way I do it, I've always done it this way, and it's worked OK.' And I say yes, but you can always improve yourself. Listen to anybody who might help you. Even the batboy. If you think you know it all, you're never going to improve.

"Now, too, some of these kids are so sensitive. The managers and the owners have to love them or they can't play their best for them. Baloney. Terry didn't talk to McGraw for years, but he always produced for John. Tinker and Evers never talked to each other off the field, but they sure did on the field, and they won pennants.

"And those personal things never got beyond the stadium, either. Nowadays, everybody in the clubhouse is a reporter, a sociologist; everything is exposed! You judge a player by what he does on the field, not off the field. I don't believe in a newsman, for instance, telling about a player's personal life unless his personal life is interfering with his performance on the field, in which case the public deserves to know because, after all, the public is paying to see that man do his best.

"Now, I don't want to put all of the blame on the kids. Too many coaches nowadays want to make too many big changes. What you try to do is to improve players within the framework of their styles; improve their styles, not change them. And they give kids so much philosophy and so many rules to follow and have so many quirks, they confuse the kids.

"Some organizations now advocate that all their pitchers throw overhand. That's nonsense. What would they have done with Carl Mays, who threw underhand, or Walter Johnson, who came in more from the side?

"They don't teach the kids some of the simplest fundamentals. They write all these books on hitting, but they always leave out the most important element: the bat. A bat is like a golf club. You throw it out there and let the bat do the work. A good punching prize fighter doesn't pick a punch up from off the ground. He gives you that good, compact, short jolt. Henry Aaron was a good example. These fellas today are off balance. They're swinging and the bat is still in back of the plate. You have to go out and attack that ball before it reaches the plate.

"All the hitting instructors used to say, 'Out in front and on top. Throw the bat out there.' A lot of instructors nowadays, they're telling them, 'Get your butt into it, get this into it, get that into it.' Kids are thinking about all that, the next thing they know, the umpire says strike three, and they're beefing with the umpire because they didn't get a good swing at the ball. They should leave the bench swinging, not umpiring. They've got it in their head, the ball's gotta be in the strike zone. I used to ask them, what ball can you hit best? Can you hit the low ball best or the high ball? They would say, 'I look for my pitch.' But they don't know their pitch!

"They used to call Yogi Berra a bad ball hitter. Those weren't bad balls he was hitting, except for the pitcher. They were pitched to his strengths. It's only a bad pitch if you can't hit it well. The ball doesn't have to be in the strike zone for it to be hit well!

"Too many hitters nowadays study themselves instead of studying the pitcher. They never shift their feet in the batter's box to neutralize a pitcher's curve or fastball or where he's locating the ball on them. They never adjust to account for certain situations, like hitting a fly when there's a man on third with less than two outs, or hitting a grounder to the right side to advance a man from second to third.

"You know, few hitters ever stop to think that if a pitcher is getting them out, he's going to keep throwing them the same way. So the hitter has to change HIS pattern and get the pitcher wondering, and try to force him out of HIS pattern. You talk about guess hitters. Well, smart hitters can get pitchers to guess, too. And then maybe they can get them to guess wrong.

Pitchers often aren't taught some of the basics, either. How many times, for example, when a right-handed pitcher is wild outside to a righthanded hitter, do you see him do a simple little thing like shift over to the far right end of the pitcher's rubber and pitch from there, so as to adjust his direction?

"A lot of young pitchers don't do a simple thing like keep their eye on the target. Their heads are flying all around. They have to keep picking the plate up. It's like shooting a rifle. You must keep your eye on the target ALL the time.

"And too many pitchers nibble around and lose batters to walks or have to come in with a fat pitch when they get behind on the count. Look, the odds are against even the greatest hitters, so pitch the ball to them!

"These young pitchers say, 'He hit my best pitch.' Well, he might have hit his best pitch, but it might not have been the best pitch for that batter. You should never lose a game on one pitch. If all a guy can hit out of the park is a fast ball, never give him a fast ball in a situation where a homer can win a game.

"As for the real little kids, the amateurs, leave them alone until they're 15 to 17 years old. Let them have fun playing the game. Then if they're not getting results, you can change them a little bit, because it's no fun to be bad, either. But don't tell them when they're so young that they have to hold their bat up and open up their stance and all that. They get frustrated and lose interest.

"You know, baseball is a game, and it's challenging and fun because of the uncertainty of it. You can't sit down tonight and devise plays that you're going to use tomorrow, like you do in football. I used to say, in a close game, too bad we don't have a guy on the bench we could send to the plate and tell him, '69, 42, hike!' and have him hit one over the fence!"

George Kelly used to do that without signals.

Summer Activities Underway

The Daly City Recreation Department's "Summer 77" program swings into its third week of daily activities. Barbeques, whiffle ball tournaments, sports clinic, arts and crafts, movies and cartoons are just a few of the many activities opened to children at most of the playgrounds.

Last week's playground news:

NORTHRIDGE PARK

Whiffle ball is the most popular activity at Northridge Park. Billy Moyle leads the park in home runs with a solid 19. He's followed closely by slugger Sal Navarro with 15. Raymond Moyle is also challenging for the lead as he hit five round trippers in a single game to raise his total to 10. Other participants are Phil Frenkel, Jerry Lewis, Roger Zapata and Joseph Salangsang.

Sports And Recreation

Carroms also is a popular game at the playground. June Salangsang, Mari Pender and Patty Pender are a few of the participants. A barbeque cookout was held July 1 to climax the week. Sand candles were made after the bar-b-que, led by Athea Tully, Christine Moyle and Jania Tully. Northridge Park hosts a barbeque cook-out each Friday and invites all to bring their choice of meat to be cooked. Northridge Park also is looking fora challenger in whiffle ball.

SKYLINE

Basketball champion "Sly Scotty Parks" defeated "Crazy Chris Salas" 24-20 in a thriller. The game was decided in the last few minutes. Other participants were "Terrific Terry Lewis" who beat "Mighty Mike Candua." "Ramming Roland Ramirez" and "Jet Jeff Davis" also were in the tournament.

Carroms champ was Jack Bongitislia and runner up champ was Richard Marinos. Other tough opponents were Dennis Magbitang, Orland Ramirez, Jr. Dizon, Arnold Ramirez, Eric Allen and Kevin and Brian Salas.

Kickball and trench also are popular games with Carl Warren, Dennis Murphy, Jody Hasting, Mike Koby, Chondia Napp, Jimmy Parks, Richard Marinos, Robert Zucchiatti and Teddy Mouskatiskis.

The second weekly winner of "The butterfingers of the week" goes to Richard Marinos. Strikeouts of the week goes to Scotty Parks and Chris Salas.

WESTLAKE PARK

This past week was a busy one for Westlake Park. On Tuesday 16 Westlakers ventured to Fremont Central Park. On Thursday the second sports clinic and contest day was held, this one being on football. Coach Jimmy Tate demonstrated some of the finer points of punting, passing, and shanking. In the over 13 boys division Dave Pacheco took top honors with Sean White, a close second. In the over 13 girls division Judy Pardini dominated with Anne Marie Viglizzo in second, Kathy Doherty third and Cindy Lacy a close fourth.

In the under 13 boys division Dewayne Fields claimed first and in the under 13 girls division Sonya Cross edged Stephanie Bonner in the days closest contest.

In ping-pong ladder action Steve Richards edged Kevin Mertens for sixth place on the ladder. Barbeques are held every Friday at noon. The only requirement is that participants bring their own food.

WESTMOOR TRACK

The 10 a.m. track club open to everyone is having one of its finest years in the Daly City Recreation Department. Started by John Cannon and run by Coach Dan Montelongo with assistance by Reggie Love and Howard Calhoun, there are over 50 youngsters signed up. Ages are eight to 17. At present, activities are high jumping, long jump and sprints.

Samuel Chandler

There's a story going around which holds that many years ago the Devil grew alarmed over the proliferation of Holy Bibles; so he sent an army of gremlins to punish the publishing industry. Ever since, according to Charles Scribner, the business has been in such a terrible state "it's enough to break your heart."

Nevertheless, now and then Mr. Scribner and the other publishers beat the gremlins and bring out a book that causes readers to shell out their dollars and cents. To keep the book trade informed of such titles, periodically "Publisher's Weekly" asks the major houses to list a few titles that they plan to use to beat the Devil and his army of gremlins.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED at the titles the publishers list. For spring and summer, Scribner's lists, of all things, "The Scribner-Bantam English Dictionary"and describes it as clear and concise and something new in dictionaries.

Then, to add incredulity to surprise, Scribner's ignores most of the science fiction and mystery novels the company publishes and name among its other choices a biography entitled "Jesus of Nazareth," "Designs for Needlepoint and Latch Hook Rugs," a psychiatry text called "If the Patient is You (or Someone You Love)," "Love and Hate on the Tennis Court," by two medical doctors; and "Trapunto Quilting." The only novel that Scribner's lists is Gillian Martin's "The Goat, The Wolf, and The Crab," which is a story about a woman who discovers she has cancer and decides to live the rest of her life as an independent, self-sustaining person.

Money, the commodity that Rabelais called "trouble without equal," is the subject of several of the books listed for spring and summer. For May, Macmillan lists "Anyone Can Make Big Money Buying Art." Herein Morton Shulman includes information on how to spot a good art investment, where to find dealers' sources and how to get tax-free income from art transactions.

For April, Playboy Press recommended "You Can Still Make It in the Market," by Nicholas Darvas. It is an outline of a system for charting the stock market by the author of "How I Made $2,000,000 in the Stock Market." In April Farrar published a book that is proving popular, "When to Sell: Inside Strategies for Stock Market Profits," by Justin and Robert Mamis.

SEX IS A BIG ITEM for publishers. There's "The Casanova Complex" from Stein & Day, in which Lucy Freeman looks at Hugh Hefner, Frank Sinatra, Wilbur Mills and other modern day Casanovas. There is Macmillan's "The Homosexuals," by Alan Ebert. Here gay men from various walks of life speak for and about themselves. In "Women and the Crisis in Sex" by Dr. Gideon and Mrs. Barbara Seaman, Rawson Associates say they have published the most important medical story of the 1970's.

"Sexual Counseling," by Eugene Kennedy, is Seabury Press' choice for the April list. "Sex for Women," by Carmen Kerr, is Grove Press' guidebook to sexual problem solving, which has as a subtitle "A Feminist Path to OK Sexuality." In The Sexual Outlaw" by John Rechy, Grove Press deals with the oppression of homosexuals in contemporary Los Angeles. "The Male Menopause" from Horizon Press, by Bowskill and Linacre, was published in April and has become a fast selling book.

AMONG THE NOVELS that appear in the spring and summer list of "Publisher's Weekly" are "Reunion," which is Fred Uhlman's story of pre-war Germany with its foreshadow of the fate of European Jews. "Home Free" is Dan Wakefield's novel of a hero who journeys through the world of drugs, disillusioned veterans, poet-farmers, and rock music. "Maria," by Eugenia Price, is a historical novel from Lippincott that is set in 18th century America and tells of a widow who makes it as a midwife. Bobbs-Merrill presents "The Face of Fear," by Brian Coffey, as a novel of suspense in which a former mountain climber is able to use ESP to identify a murderer.

These and many other books of 1977 witness that the publishers are a battle or two ahead in their war with the Devil and his army of gremlins. This is a good season for reading.

Area Trustee Resigns

Harold Purpus, president of the San Mateo County Board of Education, announced last week the resignation of Elio Fontana, board member from Trustee Area No.2 which encompasses the Jefferson Union High School district area of San Mateo County.

The board reluctantly accepted Fontana's resignation.

Fontana, who was originally elected to the county board four years ago on April 17, 1973, was recently reelected for a new four-year term in March 1977.

Purpus announced that the Board of Education will appoint a new member, as required by law, to fill the vacancy temporarily until a special election can be held Nov. 8.

Prior to this appointment, the board will establish a Citizens Nominating Committee to canvass the area and recommend candidates to the board.

Any citizen interested in serving on the board should contact Dr. Myron Schussman, deputy superintendent at the County Office of Education, 364-5600, ext. 2753.

DC Student in Engineering Project

Rush C. Manbert of Daly City helped design a complex altimeter-testing device for a manufacturer this past year as a student at Harvey Mudd College, Claremont.

Manbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rush M. Manbert, did the work for Schwien Engineering, Inc., a Southern California precision-instrument manufacturer. The firm funded the project through the college's Engineering Clinic.

He and his team leader developed a new microprocessor system for the testing unit improving its speed and performance over a range of pressures. They also designed a control console to facilitate testing by an operator.

The project is typical of the situations students face in the clinic. They are purposely confronted with real problems. Since there are no textbook answers, they must stretch their abilities in engineering design and creative problem-solving.

Another goal of the clinic is to accustom students to the conditions they will find in future jobs. They perform their clinic work within the restrictions of time, budget and available resources.

Nineteen projects were researched in the clinic this year, 14 of them for industrial firms.

The problems ranged from the design and assembly of a production-line machine for a brake-lining manufacturer to a study of how microprocessors could be used to save fuel and energy costs for the Navy.

Openers Out

Hang on to your electric can openers — they may be collectors' items sooner than you think. A leading metals manufacturer says food processors will use plastic-coated aluminum foil pouches as replacements for cans.

Advantages claimed over regular canned foods are increased quality and variety of products that can be handled.

Rotary Proposes Special Housing

A unique proposal to build 50 housing units for the developmentally handicapped has been presented by the South San Francisco branch of Rotary House Foundation to the City Council.

The Rotary Club association is proposing to supplement the city's recently constructed Housing Authority project — the only city-owned housing project in the county — with the special units rather than regular housing.

City council members, however, were reluctant Wednesday night to support the proposal, fearing it might conflict with plans of the city-appointed Housing Authority.

The council agreed to discuss the proposal with both Rotary and the Housing Authority — if the latter is willing — in a study session.

Rotary President Robert Leland explained that the project would be financed by the California Housing Finance Agency, which has never funded a housing development for the developmentally handicapped.

"We believe that the provision of housing for the developmentally handicapped will add another dimension to the city's housing program that will bring credit and acclaim," Leland said.

In 1972, South San Francisco voters approved a referendum allowing construction of 100 low-cost housing units in the city.

The Housing Authority already has supervised construction of 40 of those units and the City Council has authorized that group to seek funding for 40 more units.

Leland said the Rotarians are asking instead that 50 of the 60 units still permissable under the referendum be constructed specifically for the handicapped.

"The use of the referendum for this purpose would broaden South San Francisco's response to unmet housing needs to a greater extent than use for another public housing project for families," Leland said.

In the early 1970s, Rotary House Foundation developed Rotary Plaza, a South San Francisco high-rise structure with 181 housing units for the elderly.

"South San Francisco can set an example to other communities on the Peninsula as it did in elderly housing," Leland said.

Project coordinator Morton Schaffran said the city should think in terms of the "greatest need for the greatest number."

Film for Alcoholics

Mary's Help Hospital, Daly City, as part of its ongoing health education program for the community, plans a special showing of the movie, "Guidelines For Helping Alcoholics," July 25, at 7:30 p.m., in the hospital auditorium, 1900 Sullivan Ave., Daly City.

Admission to the movie is free.

"Guidelines" is a filmed lecture by Father Joseph Martin, long recognized as a leading American authority on the subject of alcoholism.

A question and answer period following the movie will be conducted by John Crowley, progam coordinator for Mary's Help Hospital's CAREUNIT, alcoholism rehabilitation program.

A film on alcoholism, followed by a discussion period, is scheduled for the first Monday evening of each month. For more information call Mary's Help Hospital CAREUNIT, 992-1700.

Local Youngsters Need 'Pals'

There are about 20 youngsters in San Mateo County who want and very much need a Pal — and interested area residents can learn first hand how they can become a friend indeed.

"Pal" is one of many volunteer programs the Service League provides to the spouses and children of men and/or women serving time in jail.

Starting at 7:30 p.m. on July 19, the old Victorian house which serves as the League's headquarters at 505 Middlefield Road in Redwood City, across the street from the County Government Center, will be the site of an informal get-together for prospective participants.

All interested county residents, ranging from high school upper classpersons to senior citizens, may attend the discussions which will feature several present-day Pals, sharing their experiences.

Both boys and girls, who have a parent (one or the other) in jail or prison are on the waiting list, ranging in age from five to 11 for the most part although the age limits are five to 15.

Pals is basically a one-to-one relationship, coordinator Suzie Ramey says, and the volunteers are paired in man-boy or woman-girl combinations so the adult and the child can relate to one another more readily.

She said the program is experiencing a shortage of male adult volunteers "and since we have more females, we've had to assign some mixes."

Ramey said many of the Pal volunteers are college students and young adults. The basic requirement is that the volunteer spend several hours each week for at least nine months with the child, being a Pal in the true and exact meaning of the word.

Ramey said that the League does not want its volunteers to take on the role of the absent parent nor to become the meal tickets for the families.

"We tell both the families and the volunteers that the league's Pals are not parents, social workers or therapists — that they are only friends; and we make our people very much aware that they are there for the child, and for the child alone," she said.

Salary Hikes for Pacifica Aides

By TERRY DAVENPORT

The City of Pacifica reached agreement with three groups of city employes last Wednesday night and approved salary boosts retroactive to July 1.

Pacific fire fighters (IAF Local 2400) won a 5 to 6 per cent raise in their salaries.

Another salary increase, effective July 1, 1978, will be determined by combining a 2 per cent increase with one-half of the percentage change from March 1977 to March 1978 in the local Consumer Price Index. This amount may not exceed 7 per cent.

Th firefighters' agreement also provides better medical benefits and $10,000 of term life insurance for each employe.

The city's part-time employes received a 5 per cent pay raise, their first salary increase since July 1, 1974. Hourly salary rates now range from $2.50 per hour to $4.98 per hour for the 14 part-time employes. All but one, a police department crossing guard, work for the recreation department.

In approving the increase for the part-time employes the City Council noted that it still may decide to eliminate some part-time positions if budget limitations require a cutback.

The city manager's secetary and the personnel secretary are the only workers affected by th agreement negotiated for Pacifica's confidential employes.

They won a 5½ per cent salary raise, meaning their salaries may range from $1,001 to $1,430 per month. The two workers were also awarded better medical and dental benefits.

Oyster Point Expansion Gets $7.5 Million Okay

By VERN KROGH and JANET PARKER

Months of negotiations were concluded last Wednesday night when commissioners of the San Mateo County Harbor District approved an agreement with South San Francisco to expand and improve Oyster Point Marina at a cost of roughly $7.5 million.

Harbor commissioners went into regular session at 8 p.m. after a 45-minute study session to give the 10-year agreement unanimous approval.

City Manager C. Walter Birkelo of South San Francisco left the Half Moon Bay meeting immediately to take the document to his City Council.

Birkelo told commissioners that all that is needed for the project to go to bid is approval by the South San Francisco planning and park and recreation commissions.

The agreement covers the first two phases of a three-phase improvement plan, which was prepared by Willis C. Caryl of the engineering firm of Daniel, Mann, Johnson & Mendenhall.

The first phase will include the dredging of a new basin, breakwater construction and rough grading of the shoreline to permit construction of a restaurant, shops and other developments.

The second phase will cover more extensive landscaping and replacement of existing facilities.

Under the agreement, the harbor district will advance $640,000 to the city during the first two years of development.

"We think this is an extremely viable project, and the harbor district will get its money back in short order," Birkelo said.

He predicted there will be $384,000 in excess revenue during the 1980-81 fiscal year, $275,000 during 1981-82 and $225,000 during 1982-83.

Birkelo said while South San Francisco city councilmen are not willing to turn over the entire project to an outside agency, they want it to be a joint project with the county's harbor district. Under the agreement, a governing board of three councilmen and two harbor commissioners will oversee the project, and both the district and the city staffs will be involved in the improvements.

The agreement does not exclude the possibility of the harbor district taking over operation of the marina, according to Birkelo.

Henry Boswick, general manager of the San Mateo County Development Association, predicted the project will bring badly needed employment to the South San Francisco area, and will develop new taxes from private enterprises. He said the marina is giving the public additional access to the Bay, something wanted by the Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

It would cost the City of South San Francisco $191,000 a year and the delay of many other needed projects if it does not proceed with the marina expansion project.

City Manager Birkelo told the City Council that every year the project is delayed, the costs will escalate $595,000.

His report in favor of expanding Oyster Point Marina came at the same time expansion foes are announcing that they have enough signatures to force the issue to a citywide ballot.

However, those petitions — containing the signatures of 10 per cent of the city's registered voters — must be certified by the city clerk after July 14.

The City Council has set yet another study session on the new feasibility figures and additional economic information for next Wednesday night.

Birkelo's report this week was in response to questions raised recently by the council.

The council last month voted to proceed with an engineering agreement for the expansion as well as the joint powers agreement with the San Mateo County Harbor District.

The proposed project would increase the number of berths from 280 to 570.

However, the local United Taxpayers Association has pleaded with the council to put the issue on a ballot, claiming that the project could drain the city's general fund. The council has refused.

But Bierkelo attempted to explain in his latest report that the city's general fund will suffer if the marina is not built.

The regional Water Quality Control Board two years ago ordered the city to clean up the perimeter of the marina in a process called leachate control.

"It is probable that the state WQCB will take action to enforce the provisions of the court order, requiring mitigation within the next six to 12 months, and that approximately $1.1 million will be required for this purpose," Birkelo said in his report.

Presently, the city plans to provide leachate control within the marina project, using the federal and state marina loans.

Without an expansion project, he explained, the city will have to pay for that work itself.

The most feasible solution, he said, would be to allocate all of the city's capital improvement funds for 1977-78 and 1978-79 for leachate control. That would result in postponing for three to five years other capital improvements, including a police facility, parks and playgrounds, senior citizen facilities, library expansion and street work.

"It would also be necessary, in my opinion, for the city to levy the remaining 1.8 cents per $100 assessed valuation remaining in its legal tax authorization, to raise minimal funding for the most urgent capital needs," the city manager said.

An alternative, he said, would be to ask voters to approve a general obligation bond issue in March.

In addition, Birkelo said, the city would lose an estimated $58,000 in property and sales tax revenue a year if the marina is not constructed.

Finally, the South San Francisco Unified School District probably would lose $65,000, or more, annually in property taxes from the marina, which most likely would increase its tax rate.

Councilman William Borba, who has opposed the marina expansion, questioned the validity of the leachate control argument.

"I think this is a scare tactic for the public," Borba said. He suggested the city try harder to find other funding for leachate control.

Public Services Director Frank Addiego said the city already has pursued every possible grant opportunity.

"I don't think you tried hard enough," Borba said.

He suggested selling the city-owned property at Chestnut and Grand Avenues purchased four years ago to build a police and fire facility and using the revenue to pay for leachate. The facility is another proposed city project which remains in limbo.

However, Mayor Emanuele Damonte reasoned that since the future of the Public Safety Facility still is unresolved the property shouldn't be sold yet.

"If the WQCB forces us to move, we may be selling more than that property," Damonte said.

Jim Keegan, United Taxpayers member, said last week that after less than three weeks of ringing doorbells, petitioners believe they have collected at least 1,900 signatures, the number required for a referendum.

"We're really impressed with the response," Keegan said. UTA members said they believe they will be able to turn in the petitions before the July 14 deadline, four weeks after their campaign began.

Petition circulators have reached every neighborhood in the city, he said.

TISHA B'AV

The regularity of the Jewish calendar can be marked not only by the observance of holidays and festivals, but also by fast days which occur six times during the calendar year.

In addition to Yom Kippur, a 24-hour fast is also observed on the 9th of Av (Tisha B'Av). Four others require only a daytime fast from sunrise to sunset. Tisha B'Av (commencing Saturday night, July 23, 1977 at Sunset) is a major fast day for the Jewish people; however, unlike Yom Kippur, it is not a holiday and one can work while fasting. Special dirges are recited in Synagogue and the Megillah of Lementations is read.

The Fast of the Ninth Day of Av, Tisha B'Av, commemorates the destruction of the first Temple in Jerusalem by the Babylonians in the year 586 B.C.E. as well as of the Second Temple by the Romans in the year 70 C.E. The ninth day of Av has thus become the day of National Jewish mourning.

Congregation B'nai Israel, 1575 Annie St., Daly City, will observe services for Tisha B'Av, July 23, at 8:15 p.m. Services will be led by Cantor Blumenthal.

GROUND BREAKING FOR A NEW SHOPPING CENTER

Representatives of the developer, the owners and the Daly City Chamber of Commerce were on hand to break ground for The Market Place Shopping Center, corner of East Market and Third Street, Daly City. The shopping center, with 10,500 square feet of store space, is scheduled to open Oct. 1. Pictured clockwise are Bruno Scopesi, owner; Roy Uccelli, owner; Charles Turner, past president of the chamber; Ray Logomarsino, developer; Pete Markovich, chamber manager; Aldo Simonetti, chamber president; and Arnella Adams, Miss Daly City. The shopping center will include a liquor/deli, beauty shop, real estate office, laundromat, ice cream/bakery, produce market, gasoline station and Fotomat. Alta California Properties, Inc., of San Mateo, is the developer.

Bank Sells 27 of its Branches

The Bank of California announced last week it has accepted offers to purchase 27, or just over a third, of its retail bank branches in California for $22.15 million over net asset value.

The Sumitomo Bank of California will acquire 19 branches, primarily in the Bay Area and Los Angeles metropolitan area, and Wells Fargo will buy eight branches, mainly in San Bernardino and Orange counties.

One of the branches going to Sumitomo is at 725 Camino Plaza, San Bruno, the only one involved in San Mateo County.

The sale is subject to approval by various banking regulatory authorities. In the interim, all branches will continue to be operated by Bank of California.

The bank, a division of BanCal Tri-State Corp., which also has banks in Oregon and Washington, put 33 of its 74 California branches up for sale May 11, to be sold in four groups.

It didn't quite work out that way and six widely scattered Northern California branches haven't been sold. Two are in Redding and the rest are scattered from Shasta Dam to Tahoe City.

These will be sold off individually, a bank spokesman said, with no more branch sales contemplated after that.

The sales won't effect the bank's standing as the seventh largest commercial banking operation California and 39th largest in the nation, the spokesman said.

The remaining 41 branches are more concentrated and will be the nucleus of future expansion "on markets where we're going to be focussed," he went on.

It was a matter of size and money, he acknowledged. For Bank of California it was a choice of concentrating in areas where business is best now or spending its resources trying to keep up with giants like Wells Fargo Bank with branches everywhere. Bank of California management decided on the first course, he said, noting that besides increasing the bank's equityby $13 million after taxes, the or about 10 per cent, the book value of BanCal shares has risen from about $30 to $34, which is good news for the shareholders.

The spokesman said Bank of California right now is strongest on the Peninsula from San Mateo south to San Jose and in Alameda and Contra Costa counties and the Danville, Sacramento and Modesto areas in Northern California and San Bernardino, Orange and San Diego counties in the south.

The main downtown business offices in the San Francisco Financial District and in Los Angeles and San Diego also have been retained.

About 600 of Bank of California's 3,600 employes will be effected. The spokesman said the buyer banks have agreed to give transferring Bank of California employes credit for past service in employe benefit and compensation schedules. These schedules with both banks are comparable to Bank of California's, the spokesman noted.

Sale of the 27 branches will reduce Bank of California's loans by about $135 million and its deposits by about $255 million.

Sumitomo would pay $19.9 million and Wells Fargo $2.25 million over net asset value, the price difference being accounted for by the number of branches purchased and relative difference in size, basic economics and geographic locations, the spokesman said.

Rodriguez Acquitted Of Shooting Charge

A San Mateo County Superior Court jury acquitted Nelson Rodriguez, 27, Friday of an attempted murder charge stemming from an incident at the Tanforan Park Shopping Center parking lot in San Bruno last April.

After hearing 2½ days of testimony, the jury of four women and eight men deliberated for four hours before rendering the not guildy verdict.

This is the second time Rodriguez has gained acquittal in connection with a shooting. He was found not guilty with five other defendants of Latin descent of the street killing of San Francisco Patrolman Joseph Brodnik in 1970. The case became known as the Los Seite murder trial.

At the San Mateo County trial which opened last Tuesday before Judge Frank Piombo, Rodriguez testified about the Tanforan incident.

He said a man named Balmore Preza had obtained television and stereo equipment from Nelson's brother in trade for narcotics. And that he met Preza at the Tanforan parking lot to get the equipment returned.

Rodriguez said Preza failed to bring the equipment, and that when he got into the car, Preza pulled a gun on him.

Rodriguez told the court he wrestled with Preza and the gun discharged, striking Preza in the face and stomach.

Preza, however, testified under questioning from Prosecutor John Oaks, that Preza shot him. And that after the shooting he ran from the car to get help. San Bruno police found in Preza's car some spent bullets, a hypodermic needle and $1,5000 in cash.

In his closing statement, Oakes submitted that Rodriguez shot Preza with the intention to kill him and that the motive was robbery.

But Defense attorney Dennis Woodman attempted to destroy the credibility of Preza, by alleging that he had a history of drug dealing. He adds the jury rhetorically: "Would you buy a used car from that man? If you would not, don't buy my client's life from the man."

Woodman also argued that evidence presented by the prosecution did not clearly show that Rodrigues intentionally shot Preza.

ACT Tells '77-'78 Season

The complete season of the American Conservatory Theater has been announced with the 1977-78 repertory leading off in October with Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," one of the master playwright's most towering dramas. Subscribers to the 1976-77 season just concluded have been notified that July 8 is the final deadline for renewal, after which the public campaign will get underway.

"The Master Builder," Henrik Ibsen's soaring vision of an old man's final struggle to transcend himself and the narrow confines of his life immediately follows "Julius Caesar" with A.C.T. director Allen Fletcher again translating and staging one of the father of modern drama's finest works.

Two revival productions provide additional diversity to an eclectic season, the first of which will be "A Christmas Carol," which was first presented last year under the generous sponsorship of the Standard Oil Company of California, and which enjoyed a sold-out holiday season engagement.

Continuing into the New Year will be W. Somerset Maugham's "The Circle," which exposes a titled family of the 1920s to a long past sexual scandal in spite of their current social standing amidst the English aristocracy.

"All the Way Home," a Pulitzer Prize-winning American classic, will follow. Tad Mosel's drama recalls a sudden tragedy which unites five generations of a Southern family whose grim reunion finally brings about a moving affirmation of the joys and mysteries of family love.

A decidedly different note appears with "Hotel Paradiso," a slapstick comedy in the tradition of "A Flea in Her Ear," which has been called the definitive French farce. The Georges Feydeau and Maurice Desvallieres farce presents a gallery of comic characters who rendezvous for various purposes at a notorious Paris hotel.

One of John Guare's most recent plays, "Marco Polo Sings a Solo," a rich and fanciful comedy of the future set on an iceberg in the North Atlantic at the end of the 20th century, follows his successful A.C.T. repertory offering of "The House of Blue Leaves" during the 1972-73 season.

The final new production of seven included in A.C.T.'s upcoming season will be "The National Health," Peter Nichols' award-winning comedy-drama. A solid British hit, the play unfolds in a shabby London hospital, revealing the common humanity of its patients — and exposing the funny, exotic fantasy lives of its doctors and nurses.

"Travesties," one of the biggest hits of the 1976-77 season which was held over at the end of May for a full week into June, will be A.C.T.'s second revival of the new year. The highly-acclaimed comedy by Tom Stoppard is offered on the A.C.T. subscription 9-play series along with "A Christmas Carol."

Orders are being accepted from new subscribers now which will be processed on a first-come-first-served basis after the July 8 renewal deadline. Information and order forms may be obtained by writing A.C.T. Subscriptions, 450 Geary St., San Francisco 94102.
